STATE DRY LAW IS OBJECT OF ATTENTION

"VOTE AS YOU DRINK" IS SHORT
SLOGAN OF WET
FACTION

Statements to the press have been the principal ammunition in the fight between wet and dry forces in Wisconsin. The wets seeking to repeal the state dry law and the drys trying to save it. The issues emphasized by wet and dry leaders are presented here, stories of the claims and efforts of the opposing factions, each of which hopes to win the referendum on prohibition law repeal on April 2.

Madison, Wis., March 30.—Milk or beer? Shall the stomach rule the brain? Will Wisconsin secede from the Union?

According to statements of dry leaders, those issues are to be decided April 2 when this state votes on repeal of its prohibition law.

Three organized groups are fighting the efforts of wet forces to repeal all state dry laws in Wisconsin. Concerted action by sectarian bodies, notably the Methodists and Baptists, represents church influence which undoubtedly will count effectively in the final tally of ballots.

Business men have backed a "citizens committee" in an effort to prevent an affirmative vote in the referendum—a vote which would instruct the legislature to do away with the state dry law.

The Anti-Saloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union offer the most extreme, if not the most effective, arguments of the campaign.

"Wisconsin promised to defend the flag; both parts of the Duncan resolution for repeal or modification are an attack on the flag," said the Wisconsin edition of the current "American Issue," organ of the Anti-Saloon League.

Nullification and secession were terms applied by Mrs. Annie Warren, state president of the W. C. T. U., to the outcome of the referendum if the proposals of Sen. Thomas M. Duncan, its author, are upheld.

Economic arguments are the stronghold of the citizens' committee. The bottle of milk has replaced the bottle of beer, bringing prosperity to farmer and workman alike, members of this group contend. Millions of dollars have piled up in the state school fund from the fines collected for violation of the dry law. "Save the law and save yourself from higher taxes," is the cry.

Emerson Ella, head of the citizens committee, uses the expressive, if inelegant, "Government of the belly, by the belly and for the belly" in replying to the slogan of the wets "Vote as you drink."

Churches throughout the state will offer prayer tomorrow for defeat of the referendum proposals. Pastors will urge their congregations to get out the vote.

"The women of Wisconsin can win this fight," says Assemblyman Wallace Ingalls, a wet two years ago and now dry leader in the legislature. And women seem likely to receive the credit if the drys win.

Madison, Wis., March 30.—Drastic legislation of the Jones law and "life-for-a-pint" type will be started immediately by Wisconsin drys if they defeat the prohibition repeal referendum Tuesday, Sen. Thomas M. Duncan, its author, predicted here today.

"This campaign has become more than a wet and dry fight," said the Milwaukee socialist. "It is a contest to determine whether the Klan and the Anti-Saloon League, twin forces of intolerance, shall add Wisconsin to the list of mid-western states they dominate."

Wet forces are concentrating on the first question of the referendum, repeal of the entire state dry law. The second question, amendment of the law to remove penalties for making and selling beer, has been ignored.

"Vote as you drink — be honest with yourself and your state," is the battle cry of the Duncan forces.

Encouraged by a series of "breaks" in their favor, wets are confident they will win. They expect the lat-

2 MEMBERS OF CONGRESS ARE IN HARD STRAITS

VOTED TO SUPPORT PROHIBITION, ACCUSED OF BRINGING LIQUOR INTO COUNTRY

WARRANT FOR REP. M. A. MICHAELSON, CUSTOM REPORT AGAINST REP. MORGAN

Washington, March 30.—(U.P.)—Two members of congress, both of whom have consistently voted to support prohibition, stood accused today of bringing liquor into the country.

A warrant was out for Rep. M. A. Michaelson of the seventh Chicago district charging him with transporting liquor in Florida, and unless the congressman surrenders today he will be declared a fugitive from justice. The warrant was issued by federal officials in Chicago.

A report filed by two customs officials in New York accused Rep. Wm. M. Morgan of Ohio of having four bottles of liquor when he returned Monday on the liner Cristobal from Panama.

Morgan here today reiterated his denial that he had liquor with him Monday, saying he had never taken a drink of whiskey and had always supported prohibition.

Chicago, March 30.—United States deputy marshals were sent out from the federal building today with orders to bring in Al. Albert Michaelson, "dry" congressman from the seventh Chicago district, on a warrant charging him with violation of the prohibition laws.

Michaelson had been given 24 hours in which to surrender after receipt here of the capias signed following his indictment in Jacksonville, Fla., on charges of importing, possessing and transporting several trunks filled with fine liquors.

United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker has fixed Michaelson's bond at $2,000 so that when he is brought in he will merely answer to the warrant and then be released pending action on the removal proceedings.

Jensen's Solo Endurance Record is Unofficial

Washington, March 30.—(U.P.)—Martin Jensen's solo endurance record is unofficial, his flight of 35 hours and 35 minutes setting no new mark in a recognized classification although he flew a few minutes longer than any previous solo aviator, National Aeronautic association officials said today.

The unofficial record of the late Lieut. Royal V. Thomas, which Jensen exceeded by a few minutes, was not recognized either and hence Jensen's slight margin gave him unofficial credit for the feat.

est of these breaks, enlistment of the Madison Capital-Times, LaFollette progressive newspaper, in their ranks to swing many voters.

Next to the "vote as you drink" plea, the principal weapon of the wets is their contention that existence of both federal and state liquor laws places citizens under "double jeopardy," and that "a state dry law constitutes a lure through which a citizen may be trapped under the vicious Jones law."

In addition to this, they argue that if prohibition must be enforced it can be better so under one law, with no opportunity for "buck passing" by federal and state agencies.

Duncan, who has been on the taxation committee of the legislature six years, said no taxpayer ever benefited by a single cent during the nine years the Severson (dry) law has been in force.

Liquor fines are paid into the school fund, he cited.

St. Paul, March 30.—(U.P.)—Found: the world's most sociable bandit.

He held them there for an hour. Max Knevisky and Warner Busch didn't complain very loudly about the delay, however, as the pleasant holdup man shared with them his pint flask of moonshine whiskey.

They escaped when their captor admonished them to "wait a minute" while he chased a third prospective customer down a side street.

SCHEDULED WALKOUT OF RAIL MEN IS HELD UP TODAY

Dallas, Tex., March 30.—(U.P.)—The scheduled walkout of several thousand train and shop men of the Texas and Pacific railway was held up today pending investigation of disputed issues by an emergency board to be named by President Herbert Hoover.

Strike orders calling the trainmen off their jobs had been issued for 6 o'clock this morning but were withdrawn by officials of the four big railroad brotherhoods involved when J. A. Somerville, vice president in charge of operations for the T. and P., appealed to the president for aid.

Washington, March 30.—(U.P.)—An emergency board of inquiry has been created by proclamation of President Hoover to report to him on the dispute which threatened to precipitate a strike of employees of the Texas and Pacific railway.

The proclamation, signed late yesterday by the president, automatically suspended the strike of 4,000 employees, scheduled for this morning. Under the rail labor act, nothing may be done by either the railway management or the workers until the thirty days stipulated for accumulation of the report is over.

President Hoover signed the proclamation after Chairman Winslow, of the board of mediation, called at the White House. The proclamation states the president had been duly notified of the dispute and followed with specific orders on the duties of the board created.

BELIEVE BODY OF MISS SMITH HAS BEEN FOUND

DECOMPOSED, NUDE BODY BELIEVED TO BE THAT OF MISS FRANCES ST. JOHN SMITH

DISAPPEARED FROM SMITH COLLEGE OF MASSACHUSETTS A YEAR AGO

Springfield, Mass., March 30.—(U.P.)—Discovery of the nude, decomposed body of a young woman in the Connecticut river at Long Meadow may bring to a close the search for Miss Frances St. John Smith, whose disappearance from Smith college more than a year ago created nationwide attention.

Identification of the victim was expected to be completed today when a New York dentist who had done work upon the young college girl's teeth prior to her disappearance, arrives here.

Friends of the girl's family, who viewed the body last night at the undertaking rooms where it was taken for examination, expressed the opinion that it was the body of Miss Smith.

Due to the long exposure to the elements, the sole means of identifying the body lies in the teeth.

Springfield, Mass., March 30.—Dr. W. J. Woods of Pelham, N. Y., a dentist, informed local authorities today he would arrive here at 3:20 P.M. in an effort to identify the body of a young woman taken from the Connecticut river yesterday as that of Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith college student.

At the same time, Dr. H. M. Clapp of Utica, N. Y., requested a Springfield dentist to join Dr. Woods in an inspection of the dental work of the dead girl in the possibility that the body might be that of Miss Alice Corbett, who disappeared from Smith college more than three years ago.

WILKINS HAS SCHEME TO DIVE TO NORTH POLE

TO DIVE UNDER ARCTIC ICE, CUT AND BLAST HIS WAY ACROSS

BORROWS HIS IDEA FROM JULES VERNE AND FROM SIMON LAKE

By HARRY FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, March 30.—The last tale of Jules Verne will come true should Sir Hubert Wilkins in fulfilling his present hopes, dive under the Arctic ice to cut and blast his way across the north pole.

This man who has fallen into the habit of commuting between the top and bottom of the world explained plans today for his latest expedition—a hazardous junker on which he hopes to measure the depth of the polar seas.

Sir Hubert has borrowed from the ideas of two men—Jules Verne, who wrote "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," and Simon Lake who has devoted his life to the cause of underwater craft.

Lake will be of more practicable value to Sir Hubert for it is he who is outfitting the submarine at his plant at Bridgeport, Conn.

"I would like to make the attempt this summer," said Sir Hubert. "There is need for such a trip to get information as to the depth of the ocean and if possible to determine whether the sea is a conical depression or is shaped like a basin."

"The trip across the pole could be completed in a month. During that time data could be gathered on the direction, force and temperature of the Arctic currents. On the face of it, the venture seems risky, but I consider it no more perilous than an airplane flight over the polar seas."

"By means of a diving compartment, it will be possible to discharge a man into the sea, and, using him as a sort of supply base, proceed to break down the ice by explosives or a special wire cutting device."

It is expected that at least a fifth of the voyage will be made on the surface. Then they will steam up the narrow "leads" or open spaces of water in the ice. When the "lead" runs out, they will dive and blast, carrying a supply of oxygen for 48 hours.

Lake announced the submarine will be equipped with safety devices hitherto unknown, but what they are was not revealed. July would be the most favorable month for the voyage, Commander Sloan Danenhower of the Lake factory said. Danenhower probably will pilot the submarine.

Sir Hubert, who is on vacation from his explorations in the Antarctic, is familiar with both polar regions. In April of last year he startled the world by making a daring flight across the Arctic from Alaska to Spitzbergen.

January of this year found him at the south pole, where he established a base at Deception Island and flew out to discover Graham Land, a series of islands.

ICE JAMS CAUSE TROUBLE AT MONTREAL

Montreal, March 30.—(U.P.)—Ice jams have caused considerable damage along the river front here.

The Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., suffered damages exceeding $10,000 when ice crowded over the company wharves, demolishing pipe lines and electrical equipment. Other buildings have been made inaccessible on account of high water.

DISSENSION, DISSATISFACTION IS SPREADING

MILITARY OPERATIONS IN CHIHUAHUA CHIEF SOURCE OF TROUBLE

REBEL CAUSE CLAIMED ENDANGERED ON ALL FRONTS

Mexico City, March 30.—(U.P.)—Dissension and general dissatisfaction among rebel chieftains over conduct of military operations in the Chihuahua area was reported by the government as federal forces continued the advance on Jimenez today.

The authority of General Francisco Manzo, one of the rebel chiefs of operation, over General Roberto Cruz and General Ramon Iturbe, was merely an "illusion" and all the rebel leaders had "magnificent plans" of their own for victory, the government bulletin said.

On only one point are these factions able to agree, according to the government bulletin, and that is in the general dissatisfaction with the failure of General J. Gonzalo Escobar and General Marcelo Caraveo to check the federal advance from Torreón.

Special agents of the federal government reported one hundred rebels were killed during battles which followed the siege of Mazatlan, in Sinaloa, and three hundred were wounded, including General Cruz.

They added that the rebel cause was endangered on all fronts as a result of quarrels among the military leaders of the rebellion and their dissatisfaction with General Escobar.

Federal aviators reported the rebels were in full retreat from Jimenez in Chihuahua, enroute to Bachimba Pass, 63 miles from Chihuahua City. This pass, which is 7,000 feet high, has been a famous battleground in past revolutions and it was said the rebels may make their first stand to oppose the federal advance from Torreón.

Government officials said the efforts of the rebels to obtain recruits had failed in all places with the exception of the Mayor river region in Sonora.

From El Paso it was reported that 300 soldiers had revolted against General Caraveo. It was also reported that the rebels in Sinaloa and Sonora were in a precarious position because of a lack of supplies and ammunition.

General Calles reported that General Manzo's column continued to retreat in "panic" in northern Mexico. He added that the federal campaign against the Cristeros was successful and that the religious rebels were retreating toward the Durango Hills.

ICE JAMS CAUSE TROUBLE AT MONTREAL

Montreal, March 30.—(U.P.)—Ice jams have caused considerable damage along the river front here.

The Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., suffered damages exceeding $10,000 when ice crowded over the company wharves, demolishing pipe lines and electrical equipment. Other buildings have been made inaccessible on account of high water.

DISSENSION, DISSATISFACTION IS SPREADING

MILITARY OPERATIONS IN CHIHUAHUA CHIEF SOURCE OF TROUBLE

REBEL CAUSE CLAIMED ENDANGERED ON ALL FRONTS

Mexico City, March 30.—(U.P.)—Dissension and general dissatisfaction among rebel chieftains over conduct of military operations in the Chihuahua area was reported by the government as federal forces continued the advance on Jimenez today.

The authority of General Francisco Manzo, one of the rebel chiefs of operation, over General Roberto Cruz and General Ramon Iturbe, was merely an "illusion" and all the rebel leaders had "magnificent plans" of their own for victory, the government bulletin said.

On only one point are these factions able to agree, according to the government bulletin, and that is in the general dissatisfaction with the failure of General J. Gonzalo Escobar and General Marcelo Caraveo to check the federal advance from Torreon.

Special agents of the federal government reported one hundred rebels were killed during battles which followed the siege of Mazatlan, in Sinaloa, and three hundred were wounded, including General Cruz.

They added that the rebel cause was endangered on all fronts as a result of quarrels among the military leaders of the rebellion and their dissatisfaction with General Escobar.

Federal aviators reported the rebels were in full retreat from Jimenez in Chihuahua, enroute to Bachimba Pass, 63 miles from Chihuahua City. This pass, which is 7,000 feet high, has been a famous battleground in past revolutions and it was said the rebels may make their first stand to oppose the federal advance from Torreon.

Government officials said the efforts of the rebels to obtain recruits had failed in all places with the exception of the Mayor river region in Sonora.

From El Paso it was reported that 300 soldiers had revolted against General Caraveo. It was also reported that the rebels in Sinaloa and Sonora were in a precarious position because of a lack of supplies and ammunition.

General Calles reported that General Manzo's column continued to retreat in "panic" in northern Mexico. He added that the federal campaign against the Cristeros was successful and that the religious rebels were retreating toward the Durango Hills.

GET JIGGS SHINDLE IN THE END AT KANSAS CITY, MO.

Kansas City, Mo., March 30.—(U.P.)—Jiggs Shindle, whose place of business was wrecked here last winter by a mother who charged he sold her husband and daughter liquor, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession today and was sentenced to three months in jail.

He pleaded guilty to the possession of a half pint of liquor that Mrs. Maude Wilson, the mother, found in the place when she wrecked the bar with a hatchet.

GIFFORD PINCHOT TO CRUISE SOUTH SEAS

New York, March 30.—(U.P.)—Gifford Pinchot, former governor of Pennsylvania, trimmed the sails on his ship, Mary Pinchot, today for a cruise to the South Seas to "realize the dream of a lifetime."

Pinchot's ship was scheduled to sail from a south Brooklyn pier late this afternoon. Mrs. Pinchot and their son, Gifford, Jr., will be on board.

TWO BANDITS ROB BANK OF $300

Topeka, Kan., March 30.—(U.P.)—Two bandits robbed the State Bank of Wakarusa of $3,000 today and escaped after locking A. V. Lindell, cashier, in the vault.

MICHIGAN HAS MODIFIED "LIFE FOR PINT" LAW

IN ILLINOIS "DRY RAID KILLING" OF WOMAN AROUSES IN-DIGNATION

BILL INTRODUCED IN MISSOURI
TO MODIFY PROHIBITION
LAWS

Chicago, March 29.—(UP)—Prohibition occupied the attention of four state governments in the politically "dry" middle west today.

In Illinois the "dry raid killing" of Mrs. Lillian De King of Aurora aroused widespread indignation over enforcement methods. Two assaults on the prohibition laws were made in the legislature, one for a legislative investigation of the killing, the other a resolution challenging the right of congress to control the sale, possession and distribution of medicinal liquor and sacramental wines within the state. There was also a move to repeal the state dry law.

Michigan modified its famous "life for a pint" law with amendments which passed the legislature late yesterday and were before the governor today, who is certain to sign them since they were proposed by his department.

From Missouri came reports of the first legislative move in that state toward modifying the prohibition laws, a bill introduced in the house of representatives repealing the McCawley act of 1923, which embraces nearly all of the state's liquor laws.

Wisconsin was preparing to hold a state-wide referendum on April 2 on a repeal of the state prohibition law. At the same time, resolutions were pending in the general assembly asking congress to conduct a national referendum on modification of the federal prohibition law.

Besides these evidences of discontent in the middle west, there were fights in the east.

The legislature adjourned with acting on a set of bills providing state enforcement of prohibition.

Massachusetts, which in a referendum last November memorialized congress to repeal prohibition, saw its legislature defeat a move to bar such referendums in the future. Forces opposing a move to "dry up" the state indicated they might campaign for repeal of the Massachusetts enforcement law.

Town traffic police and county highway officers kept the roadway clear while the funeral cortege moved from the De King home on the outskirts of Aurora to St. Joseph's Catholic church and then to St. Joseph's cemetery.

Behind the hearse in a large black sedan were Joseph De King, the husband who was clubbed into unconsciousness by the raiding deputy, and his 12 year old son Gerald, who fired a bullet into the deputy's thigh after he had seen the clubbing of his father and the wounding of his mother.

Mrs. Lust, who at first denied that she had fired the fatal shotgun charge, was said to have finally confessed the shooting.

She assertedly told H. H. Sturmer, Waseca county attorney, that only yesterday Lust severely beat one of their five children. Then after the children had been put to bed for the night, the woman continued, she took a shotgun down from the wall and shot her husband.

Mrs. Lust is expected soon to be charged with murder.

AN UNNECESSARY TAX

WHEN the Minnesota House of Representatives reversed itself this week by passing the cigarette tax which it previously had defeated, it did so primarily for the purpose of finding a new source of revenue for the state government, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Appropriations by the Legislature promise to be somewhat higher than they were in 1927; the burdensomeness of the general property tax has been a subject of complaint. Although the state takes only a trifling share of the general property tax, which goes almost entirely to the local units of government, the tax situation has fallen into confusion. Thus in St. Paul the levy this year is 71.7 mills of which the state government takes only 4.06 mills, the rest going chiefly to the city and county governments.

But "economy" political campaigns have caused heavy taxes somehow to become associated popularly with state expenditures and insignificant additions to the state levy assume an exaggerated importance at the state Capitol. With a little vigilance over appropriations, the Legislature will be able to take care of all legitimate needs without inventing any new taxes and still adjourn with an easy conscience as to the general taxpayer.

When new sources of revenue have been provided for governments they are rarely or never relinquished, except possibly under such circumstances as the deflation of government after war. But when in normal times a new tax is invented the tendency is for government to accommodate its expenditures to the new revenue and to lodge permanently on a higher level than before. It is practically a certainty that if the state government resorts to a cigarette tax now, it never will be able to get along without it. The direct taxes will remain where they are and the state will be saddled permanently with an additional drain upon its pocketbook into the public treasury.

The cigarette tax has found favor as a source of new revenue partly because it is easy to levy, partly because there still persists a remnant of Victorian moral prejudice against the cigarette, partly because tobacco is deemed a luxury, partly because the general use of the cigarette would yield a large sum of money, and for other reasons. But it is easier to embark on the taxation of sales than to stop. Minnesota now levies a sales tax on gasoline, but for the very particular purpose of making those who use the highways pay for them. If the state is to begin taxing sales for general revenue purposes by imposing this levy on the cigarette, it will be easy to extend the practice to other articles from time to time. If the cigarette, why not other forms of tobacco, candy, cosmetics, soft drinks, musical instruments, sporting equipment, or anything else, either luxury or necessity? The nuisance taxes, as it was discovered during the war, are a nuisance only to those who pay them. But government finds such sources of revenue both rich and convenient.

Short of imperative financial necessity, it is a policy from which the state should hold back. If the Legislature is concerned about taxes, it will not solve the problem by creating new levies, which is neither tax reduction nor economy but an evasion; it will see that burdens are not substantially increased and it will do this by dealing intelligently with appropriations and by not succumbing in panic to the fiction that slight state increases cause a financial crisis.

BUSY SUMMER IN BRAINERD

A BUSY summer is evidently in store for Brainerd. On every side we see indications of prosperity.

The building industry will be busy at the new high school, at the Montgomery Ward & Co. and other Con O'Brien buildings, and with the improvement and alteration of others. Other business firms are about to expand and build new structures. There may be a new filling station and other buildings at Sixth and Oak streets.

At the shops the future holds large extensions in-store for us. Roadways and highways are to be improved.

The tourist business will be a considerable factor in bringing good times to Brainerd this summer. Preparatory work done during the winter will bear abundant fruit. Many of the resorts will make improvements, additions and alterations. There will be considerable building of individual lake homes.

The dairy and farming country is prospering too and lumber companies anticipate selling much building material to these customers.

Our creameries are increasing output and paying larger cream checks.

Various manufacturing firms in Brainerd report increased output and that includes carbonated beverages, sash and door and millwork, foundry output, clothing, boats, etc.

Various civic organizations are feeling the enthusiasm of a rejuvenated Brainerd and are aiding in the forward movement.

A modern theater is assured to Brainerd.

All kinds of rumors are afloat in town and out of town as to the many new industries and changes to be made in Brainerd. These include everything from shops and round houses to be removed to Brainerd from other sections, new apartment houses, new industries, etc.

In everything you hear about Brainerd there is a note of encouragement, of hopefulness, of business expansion, of doing things and that alone is worth millions of dollars to this community. The day of the pessimist seems to have disappeared and Brainerd is long on optimism, courage, resourcefulness and boosting.

"THINKING WAVES"

A BRITISH scientist expresses the opinion that generations of the future will transmit waves of thought generated by the electricity in their bodies.

It's nothing new. The husband who comes home at 3 o'clock in the morning and is met by his wife at the head of the stairs is impinged by such a wave from the top of the stairs that he knows what is coming without resort to the spoken word.

Two individuals, in the heyday of youth and love, can sit for hours without relying on the spoken word for any thought transmission.

An irate subscriber can come in the office and his demeanor flashes the news that something is wrong, his name has been misspelled or something else has happened.

We don't need any news reports to feel that the house of rep-

representatives of the august state of Minnesota is about ready to slap another sales tax on some other item like golf balls, corsets, plus fours, spats, cosmetics, theater tickets, finger waves, etc.

What this British scientist advances as something new and revolutionary, transference of ideas by thought waves, has long been in use on this side of the Atlantic.

WITH the snow fast leaving, a good rain now and then is welcomed to settle the dust.

Trudy, Deaf, Didn't Hear Judge Say "Suspended"

Speeding Case Reveals Swimming Has Hurt Ears

Gertrude Ederle, so deaf she could not hear the magistrate, smiled happily when a traffic court attendant shouted into her ear that sentence had been suspended after she had pleaded guilty of speeding on Riverside Drive. She won the suspension, Miss Ederle was told, because of the glory she brought her country by swimming the English Channel and because of the explanation she offered for her offense.

Charge Overshadowed

The revelation of Miss Ederle's fight against deafness since 1926, when she conquered the Channel, completely overshadowed the traffic charge, on which a warrant had been issued for her arrest.

About eight months ago, she said, it became apparent her hearing was failing rapidly. She had just completed movie and vaudeville contracts.

Three months later, at her Pelham home, she said, she could hear only the most terrific noises. Since then she has been under treatment and her hearing has improved.

Miss Ederle was ordered into Traffic Court on February 13 and March 18 on the speeding charge, but failed to appear on either date. On March 18 Magistrate Rosenbluth issued a warrant. Yesterday she explained she had not heard of either order until Thursday, when she read of them in the newspapers at Highland, N. J., where she had been staying with a friend.

Late for Appointment

In pleading guilty of speeding Miss Ederle said she was late for an appointment with her ear doctor and drove faster when she saw traffic was light.

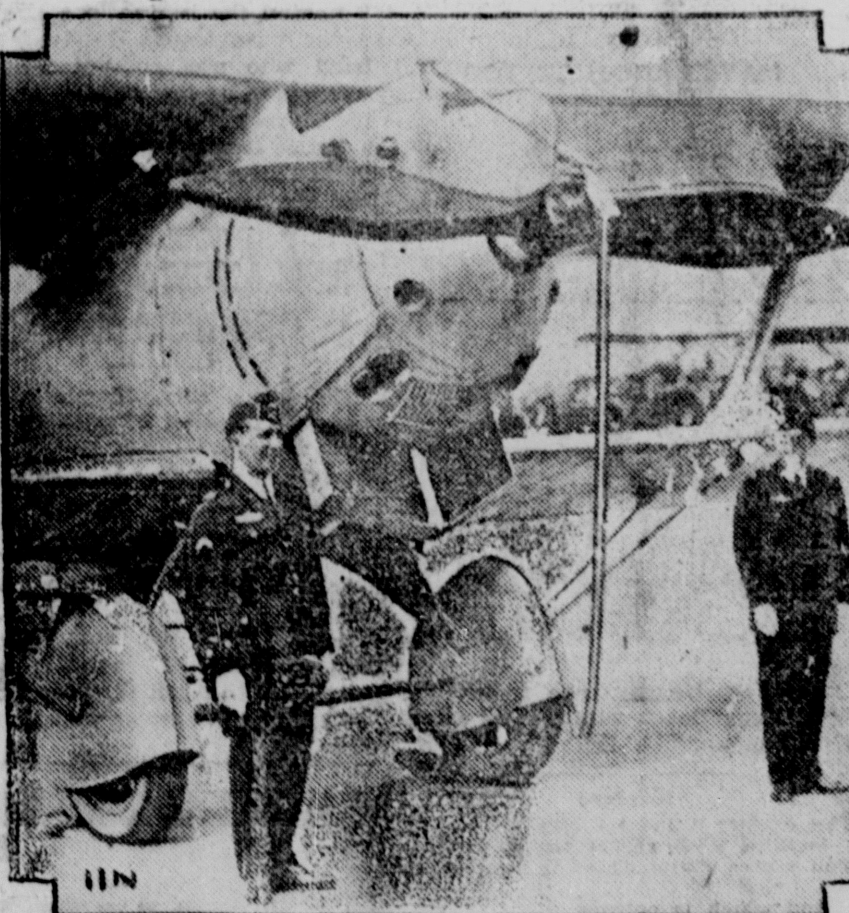

As she was leaving the court someone asked her if it were really true that she had been totally deaf five months ago. She replied smilingly:

"Yes, I couldn't even hear the sweet words my boy friend was telling me—that was the worst of it. Just think I might have missed a proposal."

Colleen Returns To Type Of Role That Made Her Famous With "Why Be Good?" at Lyceum Sunday Only

America's carefree, unchaperoned youth, super-sophisticated and scornful of propriety, is colorfully pictured in the Lyceum theatre's first "spring celebration" week screen attraction, "Why Be Good?" in which Colleen Moore plays the stellar role.

The story of this comedy-drama which shows Sunday only matinee and night is of the type that first carried Miss Moore to the heights of popularity, although the plot is decidedly original, and the characterizations of the most up-to-date variety. Miss Moore appears as a typical example of the modern girl, her costumes and personality being the last word, and her speech full of flippant wisecracks.

The Inevitable Ivy

By LILY WANDEL

(Copyright.)

WHEN he invited Linda to the house party she said in a take-it-for-granted way: "Of course, Mrs. Thornton will chaperon?"

Duquenne laughed lightly. "Don't you think my guests require a change? Every party has the same chaperon—you know some of us call her the 'Inevitable Ivy.' How about asking your aunt?"

Linda nodded carelessly, a question on her lips regarding the swimming at the lake. She was one of those slender, cut-of-steel girls who take part with intense earnestness in all kinds of violent sports throughout the day and are ready after dinner with cruel freshness for hours of dancing. Duquenne congratulated himself that he had the endurance and vigor to keep up with her.

When his love affairs reached a certain point he invariably arranged a house party at his camp. There would be a carefully selected crowd of young people, and he felt as young as any of them, yet he was always sure to have Brownell, not more than five years his senior, but decidedly middle-aged. Brownell always made him feel especially fit. But as successful as these parties were, they never fulfilled their purpose. His love affairs melted away. The thing had happened once too often and he was tired of it. He wanted to settle down. Besides, he wanted Linda.

Mrs. Thornton and Brownell were eliminated. He felt that without experienced eyes watching the clumsy gait of his love affair he might be more successful.

The first time it came did not begin very auspiciously. Duquenne was so busy that he had not a moment to devote to Linda. Candace, the cook and housekeeper, bothered him with menus. She said that Mrs. Thornton had been in the habit of making them out beforehand and simply handing Candace the ready lists. Miss Clark, the new chaperon, refused on the plea of a headache.

They were interrupted by a vigorous call for towels from nearly every bedroom. Duquenne's man Parks declared that after each house party there was a shortage of towels, but that he had expected Mrs. Thornton as usual and she had always brought a good supply along.

The dinner was not a success. The guests were more or less in a peevish humor on account of the house arrangements. Mrs. Thornton had always quietly designated the rooms for the guests and everybody had been satisfied. Candace had made an unfortunate combination of dishes—a mere forerunner of what was to come. Duquenne made a great effort to be genial and attentive, but his mind was on numerous details and he felt that Linda was inwardly sulking because, through Candace's poor judgment, she had been ushered to the smallest bedroom.

After dinner things took a new and decidedly unexpected turn for the worse. A few of the youngest guests grew rather boisterous. Miss Clark was quite incapable of controlling them and retired to her room in a huff. Duquenne grew nervous. Such a frolic under Mrs. Thornton's chaperonage was unthinkable.

With morning came more gloom. Some of the guests were decidedly cool and Miss Clark informed him that if there would be any more difficulty she would leave at once. She also complained bitterly of Candace and the hot water supply. Duquenne found himself in a perpetual state of apology. He was tired, irritated, disgusted. The whole house seemed in a state of confusion.

The next morning Miss Clark announced her intention of taking the noon train back to the city. Duquenne sent a telegram to Miss Thornton and late in the afternoon she arrived.

The next morning at breakfast peace reigned. Feeling perfectly at ease about the house and arrangements and amply satisfied Duquenne could concentrate on the entertaining of his guests.

Now he could devote himself to the courting of Linda and he felt very sure of success. Mrs. Thornton had brought Brownell along and somehow that man's deliberate middle-aged walk made the host feel decidedly young.

He started out with Linda for a walk, and a hundred feet from the house stopped while Linda joked with another guest. Duquenne, waiting, turned and looked back at the camp. On the porch railing sat the chaperon, the Inevitable Ivy, a woman of nearly his own age, slender, graceful, interesting, with the sunlight doing pretty things to her brown hair. What peace she had brought with her, what comfort! How she was able to swing the conversation in just the right channels, guide the light-hearted, smooth the irritated! He wondered what she was saying now. Brownell was listening so attentively. What were they discussing? Hang the fellow, why did he stand so close to her and obstruct Duquenne's view? He wanted to see the delicate chiseling of her features, he wanted more—he wanted to hear her voice.

That very evening he got Ivy to take a walk with him, and then he told her what he had just realized—that she was the one woman in the world for him.

And Ivy agreed.

RED CROSS CHAPTERS STRENGTHEN FORCES FOR DISASTER RELIEF

Launch National Campaign to Perfect Preparedness Plans in Every Community.

A nation-wide campaign to strengthen plans for preparedness against disaster and for emergency relief has been launched by the American Red Cross through its Chapters. The program is intended to perfect disaster preparedness committees in the ten thousand communities reached by Red Cross Chapters and their branches.

When carried out, through committees of men and women in the communities, it will insure that should a disaster come, an organization for emergency relief, including every modern method science has perfected—such as the radio, the airplane, the motor car and watercraft—can be mobilized to bring assistance, with the promptitude applied by the Red Cross in recent major disasters, such as the West Indies hurricane and the Mississippi Valley flood.

These enlarged and strengthened plans for disaster relief are set forth in the revised Red Cross manual, "When Disaster Strikes," which has been placed in the hands of every Red Cross chairman throughout the nation. The plan to encourage adoption of these added disaster preparedness methods was begun at this time because Red Cross records—covering 48 years of disaster relief—show that the period of the greatest number of disasters, large and small, ranges from the early Spring through the early Fall.

The Record of 48 Years

A historical summary of Red Cross disaster relief since 1882, shows that the society was active in giving relief in 338 domestic disasters and its expenditures in those relief operations were $49,554,000. The three groups of calamities appearing most frequently were: cyclones, tornadoes, hurricanes and other storms, 231; fires, 131; floods, 126.

During this period, the Red Cross also has given assistance to distressed peoples of other countries in 153 disasters. Total expenditures for relief at home and throughout the world, in 48 years, amount to $77,354,000.

In the four most recent major disasters, among the greatest which have ever visited the American continent, Red Cross expenditures for relief totaled $29,188,008. Only in the event of large disasters such as the Florida hurricane of 1926, the Mississippi Valley flood of 1927, the New England flood of the same fall, and the West Indies hurricane of 1928, does the Red Cross seek contributions from the general public for relief work; and frequently these are not ample, as in the four disasters listed, the Red Cross donated $1,333,201 from its own treasury to aid in the work. In the event of smaller disasters, the cost of the relief is met largely from Red Cross resources.

No Community Immune

No community is immune to great disasters of one type or another, the manual shows. One preparedness measure that can be adopted is a survey of the surrounding country, with the assistance of engineers and other experts to determine the type of disaster to which the section is subject. Hazards resulting from the presence of rivers and lakes, subject to overflow, of mines, munition factories, and other industries wherein dangers from explosion and fires may exist, are singled out for consideration.

Extension of existing disaster organizations in communities, and organization of men and women, trained in public health and community service, will result in the saving of lives and the prevention of extensive suffering, through privation, epidemic and other misfortune, should emergency arise through disaster. These organization plans, outlined in the manual, are similar to those now existing in most Red Cross Chapters, only strengthened in some particulars. They contemplate disaster preparedness and relief committees, under which function sub-committees on food, clothing, shelter, medical aid, registration of disaster sufferers and information service, transportation and communication and finance.

Co-ordination of all of the societies, organized groups and institutions in the locality is urged, so that all effort for emergency relief will be directed without conflict. Trained in advance, these committees can swing into action, and provide an orderly and systematic relief organization.

The following are expenditures made by the American National Red Cross for relief in the four most recent major disasters:

Florida hurricane, 1926	$4,477,170.67
Mississippi Valley flood, 1927	17,498,902.16
New England flood, 1927	1,299,773.93
West Indies hurricane, 1928	5,913,062.47
	$29,188,008.63

WHEN the Minnesota House of Representatives reversed itself this week by passing the cigarette tax which it previously had defeated, it did so primarily for the purpose of finding a new source of revenue for the state government, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Appropriations by the Legislature promise to be somewhat higher than they were in 1927; the burdensomeness of the general property tax has been a subject of complaint. Although the state takes only a trifling share of the general property tax, which goes almost entirely to the local units of government, the tax situation has fallen into confusion. Thus in St. Paul the levy this year is 71.7 mills of which the state government takes only 4.06 mills, the rest going chiefly to the city and county governments.

But "economy" political campaigns have caused heavy taxes somehow to become associated popularly with state expenditures and insignificant additions to the state levy assume an exaggerated importance at the state Capitol. With a little vigilance over appropriations, the Legislature will be able to take care of all legitimate needs without inventing any new taxes and still adjourn with an easy conscience as to the general taxpayer.

When new sources of revenue have been provided for governments they are rarely or never relinquished, except possibly under such circumstances as the deflation of government after war. But when in normal times a new tax is invented the tendency is for government to accommodate its expenditures to the new revenue and to lodge permanently on a higher level than before. It is practically a certainty that if the state government resorts to a cigarette tax now, it never will be able to get along without it. The direct taxes will remain where they are and the state will be saddled permanently with an additional drain upon its pocketbook into the public treasury.

The cigarette tax has found favor as a source of new revenue partly because it is easy to levy, partly because there still persists a remnant of Victorian moral prejudice against the cigarette, partly because tobacco is deemed a luxury, partly because the general use of the cigarette would yield a large sum of money, and for other reasons. But it is easier to embark on the taxation of sales than to stop. Minnesota now levies a sales tax on gasoline, but for the very particular purpose of making those who use the highways pay for them. If the state is to begin taxing sales for general revenue purposes by imposing this levy on the cigarette, it will be easy to extend the practice to other articles from time to time. If the cigarette, why not other forms of tobacco, candy, cosmetics, soft drinks, musical instruments, sporting equipment, or anything else, either luxury or necessity? The nuisance taxes, as it was discovered during the war, are a nuisance only to those who pay them. But government finds such sources of revenue both rich and convenient.

Short of imperative financial necessity, it is a policy from which the state should hold back. If the Legislature is concerned about taxes, it will not solve the problem by creating new levies, which is neither tax reduction nor economy but an evasion; it will see that burdens are not substantially increased and it will do this by dealing intelligently with appropriations and by not succumbing in panic to the fiction that slight state increases cause a financial crisis.

BUSY SUMMER IN BRAINERD

A BUSY summer is evidently in store for Brainerd. On every side we see indications of prosperity.

The building industry will be busy at the new high school, at the Montgomery Ward & Co. and other Con O'Brien buildings, and with the improvement and alteration of others. Other business firms are about to expand and build new structures. There may be a new filling station and other buildings at Sixth and Oak streets.

At the shops the future holds large extensions in store for us. Roadways and highways are to be improved.

The tourist business will be a considerable factor in bringing good times to Brainerd this summer. Preparatory work done during the winter will bear abundant fruit. Many of the resorts will make improvements, additions and alterations. There will be considerable building of individual lake homes.

The dairying and farming country is prospering too and lumber companies anticipate selling much building material to these customers.

Our creameries are increasing output and paying larger cream checks.

Various manufacturing firms in Brainerd report increased output and that includes carbonated beverages, sash and door and millwork, foundry output, clothing, boats, etc.

Various civic organizations are feeling the enthusiasm of a rejuvenated Brainerd and are aiding in the forward movement.

A modern theater is assured to Brainerd.

All kinds of rumors are afloat in town and out of town as to the many new industries and changes to be made in Brainerd. These include everything from shops and round houses to be removed to Brainerd from other sections, new apartment houses, new industries, etc.

In everything you hear about Brainerd there is a note of encouragement, of hopefulness, of business expansion, of doing things and that alone is worth millions of dollars to this community. The day of the pessimist seems to have disappeared and Brainerd is long on optimism, courage, resourcefulness and boosting.

"THINKING WAVES"

A BRITISH scientist expresses the opinion that generations of the future will transmit waves of thought generated by the electricity in their bodies.

It's nothing new. The husband who comes home at 3 o'clock in the morning and is met by his wife at the head of the stairs is impinged by such a wave from the top of the stairs that he knows what is coming without resort to the spoken word.

Two individuals, in the heyday of youth and love, can sit for hours without relying on the spoken word for any thought transmission.

An irate subscriber can come in the office and his demeanor flashes the news that something is wrong, his name has been misspelled or something else has happened.

We don't need any news reports to feel that the house of rep-

representatives of the august state of Minnesota is about ready to slap another sales tax on some other item like golf balls, corsets, plus fours, spats, cosmetics, theater tickets, finger waves, etc.

What this British scientist advances as something new and revolutionary, transference of ideas by thought waves, has long been in use on this side of the Atlantic.

WITH the snow fast leaving, a good rain now and then is welcomed to settle the dust.

Trudy, Deaf, Didn't Hear Judge Say "Suspended"

Speeding Case Reveals Swimming Has Hurt Ears

Gertrude Ederle, so deaf she could not hear the magistrate, smiled happily when a traffic court attendant shouted into her ear that sentence had been suspended after she had pleaded guilty of speeding on Riverside Drive. She won the suspension, Miss Ederle was told, because of the glory she brought her country by swimming the English Channel and because of the explanation she offered for her offense.

Charge Overshadowed
The revelation of Miss Ederle's fight against deafness since 1926, when she conquered the Channel, completely overshadowed the traffic charge, on which a warrant had been issued for her arrest.

About eight months ago, she said, it became apparent her hearing was falling rapidly. She had just completed movie and vaudeville contracts.

Three months later, at her Pelham home, she said, she could hear only the most terrific noises. Since then she has been under treatment and her hearing has improved.

Miss Ederle was ordered into Traffic Court on February 13 and March 13 on the speeding charge, but failed to appear on either date. On March 18 Magistrate Rosenbluth issued a warrant. Yesterday she explained she had not heard of either order until Thursday, when she read of them in the newspapers at Highland, N. J., where she had been staying with a friend.

GERTRUDE EDERLE

Late for Appointment

In pleading guilty of speeding Miss Ederle said she was late for an appointment with her ear doctor and drove faster when she saw traffic was light.

As she was leaving the court someone asked her if it were really true that she had been totally deaf five months ago. She replied smilingly:

"Yes, I couldn't even hear the sweet words my boy friend was telling me—that was the worst of it. Just think I might have missed a proposal."

Colleen Returns To Type Of Role That Made Her Famous With "Why Be Good?" at Lyceum Sunday-Only

America's carefree, unchaperoned youth, super-sophisticated and scorching of propriety, is colorfully pictured in the Lyceum theatre's first "spring celebration" week screen attraction, "Why Be Good?" in which Colleen Moore plays the stellar role.

The story of this comedy-drama which shows Sunday only matinee and night is of the type that first carried Miss Moore to the heights of popularity, although the plot is decidedly original, and the characterizations of the most up-to-date variety. Miss Moore appears as a typical example of the modern girl, her costumes and personality being the last word, and her speech full of flip-pant wisecracks.

The Inevitable Ivy

By LILY WANDEL

(Copyright.)

WHEN he invited Linda to the house party she said in a take-it-for-granted way: "Of course, Mrs. Thornton will chaperon?"

Duquenne laughed lightly. "Don't you think my guests require a change? Every party has the same chaperon—you know some of us call her the 'Inevitable Ivy.' How about asking your aunt?"

Linda nodded carelessly, a question on her lips regarding the swimming at the lake. She was one of those slender, cut-of-steel girls who take part with intense earnestness in all kinds of violent sports throughout the day and are ready after dinner with cruel freshness for hours of dancing. Duquenne congratulated himself that he had the endurance and vigor to keep up with her.

When his love affairs reached a certain point he invariably arranged a house party at his camp. There would be a carefully selected crowd of young people, and he felt as young as any of them, yet he was always sure to have Brownell, not more than five years his senior, but decidedly middle-aged. Brownell always made him feel especially fit. But as successful as these parties were, they never fulfilled their purpose. His love affairs melted away. The thing had happened once too often and he was tired of it. He wanted to settle down. Besides, he wanted Linda.

Mrs. Thornton and Brownell were eliminated. He felt that without experienced eyes watching the clumsy gait of his love affair he might be more successful.

The first day of the party set begin very auspiciously. Duquenne was so busy that he had not a moment to devote to Linda. Candace, the cook and housekeeper, bothered him with menus. She said that Mrs. Thornton had been in the habit of making them out beforehand and simply handing Candace the ready lists. Miss Clark, the new chaperon, refused on the plea of a headache.

They were interrupted by a vigorous call for towels from nearly every bedroom. Duquenne's man Parks declared that after each house party there was a shortage of towels, but that he had expected Mrs. Thornton as usual and she had always brought a good supply along.

The dinner was not a success. The guests were more or less in a peevish humor on account of the house arrangements. Mrs. Thornton had always quietly designated the rooms for the guests and everybody had been satisfied. Candace had made an unfortunate combination of dishes—a mere forerunner of what was to come. Duquenne made a great effort to be genial and attentive, but his mind was on numerous details and he felt that Linda was inwardly sulking because, through Candace's poor judgment, she had been ushered to the smallest bedroom.

After dinner things took a new and decidedly unexpected turn for the worse. A few of the youngest guests grew rather boisterous. Miss Clark was quite incapable of controlling them and retired to her room in a huff. Duquenne grew nervous. Such a frolic under Mrs. Thornton's chaperonage was unthinkable.

With morning came more gloom. Some of the guests were decidedly cool and Miss Clark informed him that if there would be any more difficulty she would leave at once. She also complained bitterly of Candace and the hot water supply. Duquenne found himself in a perpetual state of apology. He was tired, irritated, disgusted. The whole house seemed in a state of confusion.

The next morning Miss Clark announced her intention of taking the noon train back to the city. Duquenne sent a telegram to Miss Thornton and late in the afternoon she arrived.

The next morning at breakfast peace reigned. Feeling perfectly at ease about the house and arrangements and annoying details Duquenne could concentrate on the entertaining of his guests.

Now he could devote himself to the courting of Linda and he felt very sure of success. Mrs. Thornton had brought Brownell along and somehow that man's deliberate middle-aged walk made the host feel decidedly young.

He started out with Linda for a walk, and a hundred feet from the house stopped while Linda joked with another guest. Duquenne, waiting, turned and looked back at the camp. On the porch railing sat the chaperon, the Inevitable Ivy, a woman of nearly his own age, slender, graceful, interesting, with the sunlight doing pretty things to her brown hair. What peace she had brought with her, what comfort! How she was able to swing the conversation in just the right channels, guide the light-hearted, smooth the irritated! He wondered what she was saying now. Brownell was listening so attentively. What were they discussing? Hang the fellow, why did he stand so close to her and obstruct Duquenne's view? He wanted to see the delicate chiseling of her features, he wanted more—he wanted to hear her voice.

That very evening he got Ivy to take a walk with him, and then he told her what he had just realized—that she was the one woman in the world for him.

And Ivy agreed.

RED CROSS CHAPTERS STRENGTHEN FORCES FOR DISASTER RELIEF

Launch National Campaign to Perfect Preparedness Plans in Every Community.

A nation-wide campaign to strengthen plans for preparedness against disaster and for emergency relief has been launched by the American Red Cross through its Chapters. The program is intended to perfect disaster preparedness committees in the ten thousand communities reached by Red Cross Chapters and their branches.

When carried out, through committees of men and women in the communities, it will insure that should a disaster come, an organization for emergency relief, including every modern method science has perfected—such as the radio, the airplane, the motor car and watercraft—can be mobilized to bring assistance, with the promptitude applied by the Red Cross in recent major disasters, such as the West Indies hurricane and the Mississippi Valley flood.

These enlarged and strengthened plans for disaster relief are set forth in the revised Red Cross manual, "When Disaster Strikes," which has been placed in the hands of every Red Cross chairman throughout the nation. The plan to encourage adoption of these added disaster preparedness methods was begun at this time because Red Cross records—covering 48 years of disaster relief—show that the period of the greatest number of disasters, large and small, ranges from the early Spring through the early Fall.

The Record of 48 Years

A historical summary of Red Cross disaster relief since 1882, shows that the society was active in giving relief in 938 domestic disasters and its expenditures in those relief operations were $49,594,000. The three groups of calamities appearing most frequently were: cyclones, tornadoes, hurricanes and other storms, 231; fires, 131; floods, 126.

During this period, the Red Cross also has given assistance to distressed peoples of other countries in 153 disasters. Total expenditures for relief at home and throughout the world, in 48 years, amount to $77,354,000.

In the four most recent major disasters, among the greatest which have ever visited the American continent, Red Cross expenditures for relief totalled $29,188,008. Only in the event of large disasters such as the Florida hurricane of 1926, the Mississippi Valley flood of 1927, the New England flood of the same fall, and the West Indies hurricane of 1928, does the Red Cross seek contributions from the general public for relief work; and frequently these are not ample, as in the four disasters listed, the Red Cross donated $1,333,201 from its own treasury to aid in the work. In the event of smaller disasters, the cost of the relief is met largely from Red Cross resources.

No Community Immune

No community is immune to great disasters of one type or another, the manual shows. One preparedness measure that can be adopted is a survey of the surrounding country, with the assistance of engineers and other experts to determine the type of disaster to which the section is subject. Hazards resulting from the presence of rivers and lakes, subject to overflow, of mines, munition factories, and other industries wherein dangers from explosion and fires may exist, are singled out for consideration.

Extension of existing disaster organizations in communities, and organization of men and women, trained in public health and community service, will result in the saving of lives and the prevention of extensive suffering, through privation, epidemic and other misfortune, should emergency arise through disaster. These organization plans, outlined in the manual, are similar to those now existing in most Red Cross Chapters, only strengthened in some particulars. They contemplate disaster preparedness and relief committees, under which function sub-committees on food, clothing, shelter, medical aid, registration of disaster sufferers and information service, transportation and communication and finance.

Co-ordination of all of the societies, organized groups and institutions in the locality is urged, so that all effort for emergency relief will be directed without conflict. Trained in advance, these committees can swing into action, and provide an orderly and systematic relief organization.

The following are expenditures made by the American National Red Cross for relief in the four most recent major disasters:

Florida hurricane, 1926	$4,477,170.67
Mississippi Valley flood, 1927	17,498,902.16
New England flood, 1927	1,299,773.93
West Indies hurricane, 1928	5,913,062.47
	$29,188,008.63

Chicago, March 30. — The sly chuckles of Jack Kearns contrasted with the sigh of Tommy Loughran as the two looked into their pocket-books today in the aftermath of Paddy Harmon's opening show in his new $7,000,000 Chicago stadium.

Loughran's disappointment was manifest when he learned he had defended his light heavyweight championship against Mickey Walker Thursday night for a mere $15,289.

Kearns' humor resulted from the fact that he and Walker received $50,000 in cash for their efforts to take Loughran's title away from him.

The peculiar circumstances of course were the result of Kearns' sagacity in getting big money for fighters he manages, whereas Loughran was willing to accept a 55 per cent guarantee of the gross receipts. Kearns demanded a flat guarantee of $50,000 if Walker lost.

Loughran had visions of a $300,000 gate but the check of the receipts revealed that the show had grossed $186,267.

Out of his 55 per cent, Loughran had agreed to pay Walker $50,000 if Mickey did not win the title and he also assumed half the responsibility for the semi-windup purse. If Loughran had lost he would have received the entire 55 per cent, minus $10,000 for Walker's training expenses.

It is easy to see that Kearns won if he lost. If Mickey had beaten Loughran, Kearns would have had $10,000 and a light heavyweight championship to exploit. As it is he has $50,000.

Kearns has a reputation for taking care of himself in a financial way and that reputation did not suffer Thursday night.

Disgusted Fan Becomes Star on His Own Hook

Joe Sudgen played ball in different minor and major leagues since Satan was a kid. Joe is now coaching young hurlers.

In his day Joe was a clever catcher and a fair all-around player. With the Pittsburgh club in 1895, he was placed at short. He did well for several games, but in his fifth he had a terrible time for he booted the ball in all directions, making eight errors.

A voice from a tree top yelled: "Hey! Wooden Shoes, I couldn't play that rotten if I tried, I'm coming down and ask the manager for that job."

The owner of the voice came down. He stuck around until he could walk into the grounds. He met the manager of the Washington club instead of the Pittsburgh leader. The young man said he was looking for that fellow's job who tried to play shortstop. Washington also needed a shortstop so he got no farther for he was hired then and there.

The youngster was Eugene Demontreville, who later became one of the game's greatest infielders. From a tree top to a big league diamond was some jump.

Expect "Goose" Goslin's Arm to Be All Right

Clark Griffith expects "Goose" Goslin's arm to be all right when the season starts this year. "It's odd and all that," he says, "but the general rule in baseball is that when a man quits with a good arm he comes back next year the same way, and when an end of the season finds a man with a sore arm, the start of the next one finds him still with his handicap. 'Towards the end of last season, I had 'Goose' try his wing. He threw the ball as far as he ever did and just as accurately."

Fans will be wondering how that old rule will affect Tony Lazzeri, who quit the season with a bad arm.

Perhaps the good arms and the bad don't change during the winter because they are not being used, and consequently remain "dormant."

War Department Has Eye to 1932 Olympic Games

The War department has started preparations to enter the Olympic games for 1932. Secretary of War Davis designating Maj. Gen. Herbert R. Crosby, chief of cavalry, as department representative in all matters bearing on army participation in the games to be held in this country, probably at Los Angeles.

The army developed for the 1928 games in Holland an equestrian and modern pentathlon team and it is expected it will be allotted the same for 1932, the latter consisting of running, swimming, shooting pistol or revolver, broad sword fencing and riding, and is essentially military in nature.

The experience gained last year showed lack of competitive experience in comparison to that of European competitors which handicapped both teams. For this reason, the department desires early preparation for the coming games. Major General Crosby will soon start formation of a nucleus for each team, selection, final training of its members.

BRUINS OUTFIGHT AND OUT-

2 TO 1 SCORE

By WILLIAM J. DUNN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, March 30.—The Boston Bruins, invincible in organized hockey, today had succeeded the New York Rangers as champions of the world and holders of the Stanley cup, emblem of supremacy.

In a thrilling battle before some 14,000 fans last night the Bruins outfought and outscored the Rangers 2 to 1, to clinch the 1928-29 title, at Madison Square Garden.

The Bruins allowed no doubt as to their superiority in beating the Rangers in the second game of the final series. They outpassed the blue clad New Yorkers from the first period, and showed more speed and accuracy in shooting throughout.

Only in spirit were the Rangers able to cope with their more powerful opponents, but this alone enabled the defending champions to make a thrilling game out of what might have been a rout.

Neither team showed signs of weariness despite the fact that they had met only 24 hours before in Boston. They started the game with a dash that continued until the end and which brought the fans to their feet time after time.

Boston held a decided edge in the first period although there was no scoring.

In the second period the Bruins seemed to increase in speed while the Rangers, too, became more dangerous. It was 14 minutes after the start of the period before Harry Oliver broke loose with the first goal.

Ranger fans went wild in the final period when Butch Keeling, hero of both preliminary series for the Rangers, cut loose with a shot from the blue line that took Goaltie Thompson by surprise.

It was the longest shot of the series and one of the longest ever made on the Garden ice.

With little more than a minute to go Harry Oliver again set out for the Ranger goal. Checked, he flipped a perfect pass to Carson who was coming in fast, and the decision was reached.

In winning the championship the Bruins performed the remarkable feat of sailing through the entire Stanley Cup series without a defeat.

With the men as they head toward Los Angeles will go what Pyle calls the "largest and best portable circus and carnival in America." Manager Pyle expects to net a neat profit from his 1929 race to make up for last year's $100,000 deficit.

Americanizing Tutti Frutti

By QUIN HALL

IT ISN'T very often that a horse with such color as is possessed by Tutti Frutti gallops into view over the racing horizon.

Tutti Frutti is the Chilean horse that was shipped to Hialeah at Miami after running all of the best gallopers in South America and Cuba ragged. And Tutti Frutti has as much color in turf circles as Jack Dempsey has in the boxing realm, and that means plenty of splashing about with the paint pots.

There're almost as many rumors floating around about this gee-gee as there are oranges in Florida. Your roving reporter first heard about the nag from G. Frank Croissant, the Chicago real estate, who is supposed to have put most of the books at Hialeah out of business with his large-sized winnings.

According to Croissant, the horse was the property of the Chilean Government and Perez, the jockey who had piloted the racer in every race up until he met defeat in the Murphy Handicap at Miami, had Chilean royal blood in his veins. In addition, according to rumors Croissant had heard, every dime bet on the horse was Chilean Government money. Such rumors help build up color even if there is no color at all.

them. The horse reached the States well press-agented. It helped attract people to the Hialeah race course and aided in putting the Miami meet over.

Your correspondent went to the track and did a little sleuthing about. The Chilean Government connection with Tutti Frutti could not be verified exactly, but it wasn't flatly denied.

There were additional rumors about the horse floating around and about. Tutti Frutti, according to various statements picked up, had been trained differently than North American gallopers. Its food was placed on the ground in order that his neck muscles might be strengthened. His Chilean trainer was the only one who knew what to feed the racer. Perez, the jockey, galloped him in the early morning and took most of the care of him. Opinion as to his ability was divided. Some said that he would burn up the tracks around New York where he is booked to gallop this Summer.

Others maintained that he was just a high-class selling plater who would suffer in comparison with the better horses he would meet up north.

The running of the Murphy Handicap rather finished the Chilean trainer and jockey who had accompanied Tutti Frutti to this country. The start didn't favor the foreigner as he is said to have been flat-footed on all four when the barrier lifted. Then Perez tried to bring him into the rail instead of taking him around the field. The Chilean jockey was unaccustomed to local methods of jockeying and he got himself into a pocket. He pulled out of it in time to finish fourth. Perez immediately grabbed an interpreter and asked permission of the judges to trash four jockeys who had been riding in the race one at a time. The track officials figured that this was out of their jurisdiction and they gave the youngster the run-around. It's not known whether or not anything came of his fit of madness but, the next time out, Tutti Frutti was ridden by Jockey Legere and had little trouble in outdistancing the field in a three-horse race. "Doc" Crawford has been employed by Owner Henrique Gutierrez V. to train the horse for his starts in this country.

The jockey, Perez, is said to have sobbed like a baby when Tutti Frutti won with Legere up. It may be that the Chilean trainer and jockey will be carried along successfully for color, but this is problematical. If the horse trains well under Crawford, fans all over the country are likely to see the 5-year-old in action as Senior Gutierrez the V is anxious to prove he has a great horse in Tutti Frutti.

LOUGHRAN FINDS TITLE FIGHT NETS ONLY A BAGATELLE

HIS SHARE IN SCRAP IS ONLY MERE $15,289

KEARNS AND WALKER DRAW DOWN $50,000 CASH AS THEIR SHARE

KEARNS' SAGACITY AS MANAGER IS FULLY REVEALED TO ALL

By BERT DEMBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, March 30. — The sly chuckles of Jack Kearns contrasted with the sigh of Tommy Loughran as the two looked into their pocket-books today in the aftermath of Paddy Harmon's opening show in his new $7,000,000 Chicago stadium.

Loughran's disappointment was manifest when he learned he had defended his light heavyweight championship against Mickey Walker Thursday night for a mere $15,289.

Kearns' humor resulted from the fact that he and Walker received $50,000 in cash for their efforts to take Loughran's title away from him.

The peculiar circumstances of course were the result of Kearns' sagacity in getting big money for fighters he manages, whereas Loughran was willing to accept a 55 per cent guarantee of the gross receipts. Kearns demanded a flat guarantee of $50,000 if Walker lost.

Loughran had visions of a $300,000 gate but the check of the receipts revealed that the show had grossed $186,267.

Out of his 55 per cent, Loughran had agreed to pay Walker $50,000 if Mickey did not win the title and he also assumed half the responsibility for the semi-windup purse. If Loughran had lost he would have received the entire 55 per cent, minus $10,000 for Walker's training expenses.

It is easy to see that Kearns won if he lost. If Mickey had beaten Loughran, Kearns would have had $10,000 and a light heavyweight championship to exploit. As it is he has $50,000.

Kearns has a reputation for taking care of himself in a financial way and that reputation did not suffer Thursday night.

Disgusted Fan Becomes Star on His Own Hook

Joe Sledge played ball in different minor and major leagues since Satan was a kid. Joe is now coaching young hurlers.

In his day Joe was a clever catcher and a fair all-around player. With the Pittsburgh club in 1895, he was placed at short. He did well for several games, but in his fifth he had a terrible time for he booted the ball in all directions, making eight errors.

A voice from a tree top yelled: "Hey! Wooden Shoes, I couldn't play that rotten if I tried. I'm coming down and ask the manager for that job."

The owner of the voice came down. He stuck around until he could walk into the grounds. He met the manager of the Washington club instead of the Pittsburgh leader. The young man said he was looking for that fellow's job who tried to play shortstop. Washington also needed a shortstop so he got no farther for he was hired then and there.

The youngster was Eugene Demontreville, who later became one of the game's greatest infielders. From a tree top to a big league diamond was some jump.

Expect "Goose" Goslin's Arm to Be All Right

Clark Griffith expects "Goose" Goslin's arm to be all right when the season starts this year. "It's odd and all that," he says, "but the general rule in baseball is that when a man quits with a good arm he comes back next year the same way, and when an end of the season finds a man with a sore arm, the start of the next one finds him still with his handicap. Towards the end of last season, I had 'Goose' try his wing. He threw the ball as far as he ever did and just as accurately."

Fans will be wondering how that old rule will affect Tony Lazzeri, who quit the season with a bad arm.

Perhaps the good arms and the bad don't change during the winter because they are not being used, and consequently remain "dormant."

War Department Has Eye to 1932 Olympic Games

The War department has started preparations to enter the Olympic games for 1932, Secretary of War Davis designating Maj. Gen. Herbert R. Crosby, chief of cavalry, as department representative in all matters bearing on army participation in the games to be held in this country, probably at Los Angeles.

The army developed for the 1928 games in Holland an equestrian and modern pentathlon team and it is expected it will be allotted the same for 1932, the latter consisting of running, swimming, shooting pistol or revolver, broad sword fencing and riding, and is essentially military in nature.

The experience gained last year showed lack of competitive experience in comparison to that of European competitors which handicapped both teams. For this reason, the department desires early preparation for the coming games. Major General Crosby will soon start formation of a nucleus for each team, selection, and final training of its members.

WIN STANLEY CUP IN HOCKEY PLAY TODAY

SUCCEED NEW YORK RANGERS AS CHAMPIONS OF THE WORLD

BRUINS OUTFIGHT AND OUT- SCORE RANGERS, WIN BY 2 TO 1 SCORE

By WILLIAM J. DUNN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, March 30.—The Boston Bruins, invincible in organized hockey, today had succeeded the New York Rangers as champions of the world and holders of the Stanley cup, emblem of supremacy.

In a thrilling battle before some 14,000 fans last night the Bruins outfought and outscored the Rangers 2 to 1, to clinch the 1928-29 title, at Madison Square Garden.

The Bruins allowed no doubt as to their superiority in beating the Rangers in the second game of the final series. They outpassed the blue clad New Yorkers from the first period, and showed more speed and accuracy in shooting throughout.

Only in spirit were the Rangers able to cope with their more powerful opponents, but this alone enabled the defending champions to make a thrilling game out of what might have been a rout.

Neither team showed signs of weariness despite the fact that they had met only 24 hours before in Boston. They started the game with a dash that continued until the end and which brought the fans to their feet time after time.

Boston held a decided edge in the first period although there was no scoring.

In the second period the Bruins seemed to increase in speed while the Rangers, too, became more dangerous. It was 14 minutes after the start of the period before Harry Oliver broke loose with the first goal.

Ranger fans went wild in the final period when Butch Keeling, hero of both preliminary series for the Rangers, cut loose with a shot from the blue line that took Goaltie Thompson by surprise.

It was the longest shot of the series and one of the longest ever made on the Garden ice.

With little more than a minute to go Harry Oliver again set out for the Ranger goal. Checked, he flipped a perfect pass to Carson who was coming in fast, and the decision was reached.

In winning the championship the Bruins performed the remarkable feat of sailing through the entire Stanley Cup series without a defeat.

Quinn will meet Bob Larmore, present city singles champion, in two matches today.

DESCRIPTION OF CHRIST'S PHYSICAL BEING

PUBLIUS LENTHULUS, FRIEND OF PILATE, TOOK NOTE OF CHRIST

ALLEGED LETTER OF ROMAN HAS BEEN FOUND IN 4 LANGUAGES

The exact personal appearance of Jesus Christ always has been the subject of keen interest especially at Easter when the moving story of the crucifixion becomes vivid in the mind of the Christian world. Samuel J. Williams of Columbus, O., who has been engaged in Biblical research in Palestine, recently completed a search for an authentic physical description of Christ.

By SAMUEL J. WILLIAMS (Written for the United Press) (Copyright, 1929, by United Press)

Washington, March 29.—Only one supposedly contemporary pen-picture of Jesus Christ has been preserved for the modern world. Its authenticity is in question but it has existed for so many centuries that it is largely responsible for the conventional picture of Christ which famous artists have drawn.

This pen-sketch of Christ purports to have been written by one Publius Lenthulus, alleged to have been a friend of Pontius Pilate, possibly a minor Roman official in Jerusalem. Lenthulus took note of the strange man who went about the city, followed by disciples who called Him the Son of God, and forwarded an official report to the authorities at Rome.

The letter is known to have been in existence in the eleventh century at which time it appeared in the writings of St. Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury. Some scholars have held the letter a forgery and deny that such a man as Lenthulus ever lived. Nevertheless the description has shaped the mental picture of Christ for the world.

This alleged letter of Lenthulus has been found in four languages, all similar except for slight variation of phrase and a difference as to the color of the hair and eyes. The most striking version appears in "Palestine and the World," by Frank G. Jannaway. It reads:

"There has appeared a man here, a Palestine, who is still living, whose power is extraordinary. He has the title of the great prophet; His disciples call Him the Son of God. He raises the dead, and
